They aren't toxic to dogs, but the high sugar content can lead to sickness, obesity, and diabetes over time. It shouldn't come as a surprise if your dog starts to show symptoms like diarrhea and vomiting if they are allowed to go through a whole bag of caramel popcorn. If you notice your dog acting sluggish, tired and odd after eating too much sugar or caramel popcorn, try to keep them hydrated and call the vet if it continues. Dogs that are allowed to eat calorie-heavy products like caramel popcorn, even as an occasional treat, may eventually suffer from weight gains so it's important to moderate the amount of treats your dog is allowed to eat. Too much sugar can have a devastating effect on your dog's health. Vomiting and Diarrhea The sugar might cause your dog to experience some vomiting and diarrhea. You might think one or two pieces is fine, and you might be lucky and your dog might not be affected at all, but there are quite a few ways that caramel popcorn can harm your dog. Their system is not used to so much sugar, so the effect on their behavior can be quite profound. Both the caramel and the popcorn can be harmful to your dog. Caramel popcorn can be made quite easily at home, but it is also a popular treat sold at stores (definitely not in the dog aisle!). While it might not be outright toxic to them, both the popcorn and the caramel can have short and long term effects on their health. Sugar Crash We have all experienced it - you pig out on too much sugar, have a spike in energy, and then have a massive sugar crash later on. It is not intended to be a substitute for professional veterinarian advice, diagnosis, or treatment. The effects can range from short-term to long-term, and some can have a lasting effect on your dog's health. If the popcorn is cooked in butter or oil, it could also harm your dog's diet. They are not used to these types of foods and ingredients, and their body might react to it by becoming sick. This might cause them to behave differently to how they normally do as well. At this temperature, the sugar melts gradually and breaks down into a paste. One last concern is the calories. Some dogs are more sensitive to sugar than others, so your dog might not experience this at all. Some caramel popcorns may also utilize sugar-free caramel, which is an absolute no-go for dogs. A block like this could endanger your life, and it certainly requires a visit to the veterinarian! This will only happen if your dog consumes a large number of popcorn kernels, but since they are difficult for your dog to digest, they can accumulate over time.
